New Health Science graduate shadows Italian doctors

It has already been a whirlwind and exciting summer for Keannah Dunsmore '22 who just graduated in May with her Bachelor's in Health Science and Forensic Criminology.

Dunsmore has a passion for the medical field. She wants to explore all facets of the industry and look at different ways to apply the principles of health science.

While Dunsmore was finishing her senior year, Health Sciences Assistant Professor Dr. Kerriann Marden heard about the Doctors in Italy program and suggested that Dunsmore apply. After a thorough application process and a stressful waiting period, Dunsmore received word that she was accepted into the program.

Dunsmore graduated on Monday, Four days later she was on a flight to Milan ready to begin her first solo international adventure.
